VOLUME 3. NO. 35

WEST LIBERTY, MORGAN COUNTY, KENTUCKY, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 6, 1913.

WHOLE NUMBER 139

School Notes.

The Normal Department of the West Liberty High School again comes to the readers of the Courier with a message of good cheer. Good because we have an organized band of real workers who are trying to get out of school the benefit for which they came here. We now number 54 members in our department and each one counts for a real student. We have the class work organized so that it is real pleasure to see the young people in rapid strides doing the work they came to do. In addition to the class work they have their literary work at heart, and we feel that those who came to witness their first effort last Friday night will testify to the fact that they made no mean effort along that line. We wish to thank the patrons of the school for the very large audience that gave us last Friday night and we assure you that we will be real glad to have you come again when we give another programme which will be Friday Night, February 21st.

It is our intention to give a programme every month, but on account of some other work which has the right of way the 28, we give our next only three weeks after the last but thereafter we will give an entertainment once each month. The other work that has the right of way the 28, is a joint debate between the Normal Literary Society and the High School Literary Society. The question is: "Resolved that America (meaning the United States) will fall as other nations have fallen." The High School affirms. The speakers on the affirmative are: Kelly Whitt, Byron, Cisco and Willie Sebastian; the speakers on the negative are: Willie Elam, H. B. Franklin and Eddie Cantrill. This is an important question and we feel sure that these young men will produce arguments worth hearing, and we take this opportunity to invite all the school's friends to be present and hear the debate. It will be an open session and if you will come we will not charge you one cent to hear it, and it is safe to say that you will get "your money's worth."

We have a little request to make of the parents who live in town for the benefit of the school; and this is: Don't allow any more "parties" at your homes where the students can waste an evening's work from their studies during the working days of the school. If the young folks want to meet at your homes and have a pleasant evening, and you feel inclined to have them to do so, be sure that the evening is either Friday or Saturday when it will not break into their class work.

If the West Liberty High School is to build a reputation that will appeal to the country people so much that they will be induced to send their boys and girls here to school, it will have to do it on the principle of honest, hard work with telling results and not on the "party" basis.

We want every young man and woman who comes to our school to feel at home and satisfied. We want them to enjoy themselves, but not at the expense of their studies. The school work must stand out first as an inducement for patronage, and the pleasure side must necessarily be a side issue. The real earnest student finds pleasure in his work. And it is this phase of pleasure that we want them to seek most. The parents of the town can help us materially by refusing to allow any company of students to assemble at their homes for a good time when they should be in their rooms preparing lessons for next day as their parents sent them here to do.

We hope the people of town will see their chance to help the school by granting our request and that it will not be necessary for us to mention this matter again.

With an invitation to all the friends of the school to visit our class rooms and see what we and your children are doing, and asking that all will work together for the good of the school, we close our little message by asking to be remembered as the friend of the boys and girls of the Mountains. Normal Room,

NOAH CISCO.

The above was written Monday night. At that time there were 54 pupils in the Normal department. Since that time there has been such an influx of new students that Prof. Cisco has been compelled to move his army to more commodious quarters, the room they formerly occupied being entirely too small. Before this article reaches our readers the Normalites will either be quartered in the college chapel or the Christian church basement, and the number will be nearer 75 than 54. "There's a reason,"—Editor.

BLAZE.

By order of the Fish & Game Commission, at Frankfort, I take this means of notifying the public that all hunter's license that were issued last fall, expired on the 31st day of December, 1912. The language of the late Act regulating hunting is as follows:

"All licenses shall be dated when issued, and authorize the person named and described therein to hunt during the calendar, and then only within the regulations and restrictions provided by law."

Therefore, license issued during the year 1912 have all expired, and they afford no protection whatever to persons found hunting off their own land. The County Court Clerk has been furnished with blank licenses for this year, and will issue licenses to all persons who apply in the manner provided by law, and the licenses so issued will be good until December 31st, 1913.

All persons are hereby warned that hunting without licenses will not be tolerated. The fee is small, and is intended to promote the propagation of fish and game in this State. Any person wishing to devote time to hunting for pleasure should certainly be able to pay the license fee, and should prefer to do so to having an indictment to contend with in the Circuit Court.

I do not desire to cause any one any trouble, but any person who violates the law with impunity, be he friend or foe, will have to respond to an indictment. The law provides that one-half of the fine for any violation of the fish and game laws shall be given to the informer; and as I have quiet watchers in most parts of the county, and expect to secure them in every community, it is not likely that many hunters will escape indictment where they are seen hunting without licenses.

Every person is allowed to hunt on his own land or on the land he has leased or rented without a license. He may also pursue game that he bounces on his land or on the lands of his adjoining neighbors without a license provided he has the WRITTEN consent of the neighbor to hunt on his land.

Squirrels may be killed until February 1st, after which it is against the law, licenses or no licenses to kill squirrels until June 15th; and all violations of this provision will be duly prosecuted.

Rabbits may be hunted and killed any time until the 15th of September with guns, and may be caught in traps and snares at any time; but they must not be killed with firearms between September the 15th and November the 15th.

Quails and pheasants must not be killed in any manner except from November 15th to January 1st inclusive. And right here I wish to warn persons who own bird dogs—setters and pointers—they must not allow these dogs to run at large during the nesting period. He never entirely regained consciousness and there was little hope entertained for his recovery from the time he was stricken.

Mr. Turner was a native of Morgan county and lived here until about twenty years ago when he moved to Mt. Sterling escape them they will destroy the little quails after they hatch. Any and such dogs allowed to run at large during the said seasons will be taken before a convenient officer and declared contraband and sent to the Commission at Frankfort. But as the owners of bird dogs are generally true sportsmen I do not apprehend any trouble on this score; but they must not destroy nests of quails or the little broods.

Doves must not be killed after February 1st until August 1st, wood cock must not be killed after February 1st until June 1st.

Song birds and insectivorous birds (birds that destroy insects) such as the thrush, meadow-lark, finch, martin, swallow, wood-pecker, oriole, red-bird, cat-bird, southern nightingale, and bluebird, must not be killed or pursued or shot at with intent to kill them, AT ANY TIME; and a violation of this statute is punishable by fine of not less than $5.00 nor more than $25.00 and the costs of the prosecution.

All guns, dogs and other hunter's paraphernalia, used in the unlawful hunting, pursuit or killing of game, are subject to confiscation by the State Fish & Game Commission, and the law makes it the duty of all wardens and other executive officers to take same in possession and send them to the Commission at Frankfort to be sold.

The object of this law is to restock the State with game. We hope soon to have our fields full of quail, our woods drumming depth of about 1650 feet. Only a small showing of oil was found.

The Elk Oil & Gas Co. shot their gas well on the Josh McAlain farm on Elk Fork yesterday. Up to the time of going to press we had not been able to learn the result of the shot. It was a good strong well when first drilled in and it is reasonable to suppose that an 80 quart shot of glycerine has developed a much stronger flow of gas.

Chairman McCombs on The Country Press.

Wm. F. McCombs, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, in an address before the mid-winter meeting of the Arkansas Press Association held at Little Rock recently gave a large part of the credit for the nomination and election of Woodrow Wilson to the influence exerted by the democratic country press. Mr. McCombs said:

"If I were asked to pick out the greatest single influence in the country, it would be the country newspaper. Every page of it is read 'patentinsides' and all. I know, because I have studied the matter—in fact I have sent out a good deal of 'boiler plate' myself."

"A man cannot write a column of news matter without writing an editorial—putting his own opinion into it. One doesn't have to look at the editorial page to gather opinions—every reporter in a sense is molding public opinion. I used to think reporters were ethereal beings, plucking news items out of the air—nobody ever seeing them. But I find that reporters are intensely human."

"If you take a reporter into your confidence you need have no reason to worry, but if you don't—God help you! In the past two years I have had occasion to see a great deal of them. In fact, I have called as many as ten of them into my room at one time and have interviewed them. And from them I have gained many valuable ideas and suggestions. In these two years never has a reporter violated a confidence."

Here is a message of hope from Mrs. C. F. Martin, Booneville, Va., who is the mother of eighteen children. Mrs. Martin was cured of stomach trouble and constipation by Chamberlain's Tablets after five years of suffering, and now recommends these tablets to the public. Said by all dealers.

and engaged in business. About five years ago he went to Lexington and opened a real estate office and at the time of his death he was actively engaged in the real estate business. He was a successful business man and by hard work and honest dealing had amassed a handsome fortune.

Although he had made the Blue Grass his home for several years he never lost his love for his native county. Up until two years ago he had business interests here and even after he closed up his business he never failed to visit West Liberty several times each year. He still retained his membership in Highland Lodge No. 311, F. & A. M.

The interment took place in the Lexington cemetery the 31st ult.

Big Oil Deal.

Rumor has it that Dr. S. R. Collier has closed, or is about to close, one of the biggest oil deals that has ever been pulled off in Eastern Kentucky. Doctor will neither confirm nor deny the rumor.

He is playing the "clam act" to perfection; but the fact that the well at Cannel City is pumping steadily more than 300 barrels per day and the product is selling for $1.35 per barrel, together with the steady influx of oil men into the county, leads us to believe that the rumor is well founded.

The Home Oil Company, at Cannel City, abandoned the well near the postoffice after drilling 42 feet in the sand, or a total depth of about 1650 feet. Only a small showing of oil was found.

The Prater Fork Oil Co. shot their well Tuesday. We are informed that they have a light producing well.

The Elk Oil & Gas Co. shot their gas well on the Josh McAlain farm on Elk Fork yesterday. Up to the time of going to press we had not been able to learn the result of the shot. It was a good strong well when first drilled in and it is reasonable to suppose that an 80 quart shot of glycerine has developed a much stronger flow of gas.

Chairman McCombs on The Country Press.

A young lad just returned from a boarding school, upon being asked by "dad" how he stood in grammar at the end of the term came back with something like this.

"Say take it from me, grammar was my long suit. On the start off I was up against it hard. Couldn't get it through my nozzle. Fell back every time I went to class. Finally I says to myself, look here, old kid, it's up to you. You've got to cut out the funny business and take a brace or you'll see your finish, the surest thing you know. Well I studied, believe me. And when it came to the final exam, did I lose out? Not on your life. I was right there with 'bells on.'

There was certainly some class to the way I answered those quizzes. A cold nine-lyfe when it was all over. Not so worse, eh? Can you beat it? How I did it, I don't know. You can search me. But anyhow it's going some, eh, dad? None of 'em's got anything on me when it comes to grammar that's a cinch."

Old gent managed to gasp, "Get the hook?" Ex.

Dear Superintendent:

Under separate cover, I am sending you a supply of Blank Oaths for the teachers' term report on attendance. Before you pay any teacher his attendance fund, you should have him subscribe to one of these oaths and it should be filed in your office for future reference. No teacher can receive his attendance fund at the end of the term until after he has made the oath, and the per cent of attendance must be made for the entire term and not by the month.

Yours very truly,
BARKSDALE HAMLETT,
Superintendent,

Hogs and good milch cows are as scarce in these parts as chicken molars.

McCreary's announcement for U. S. Senator is evidently in cold storage.

Soon it will be time for some one to spring that old "Birthington's wash day" joke on us.

Has anybody noticed the phenomenal growth of the churches in West Liberty since they started the scrap with the Courier two years ago? Nit!

If it is a windy day March 3rd, the crowd of men who will be up on the sidewalks of Washington to witness the suffragette parade will outnumber the fair ones who are in the line of march.

Still no disposition of the "city dads" to tell us how the tax-money has been expended. We wonder how long the patience of the taxpayers will endure that none-of-your-damn-business attitude on the part of the board who holds by appointment instead of election.

One of the "City Dads" told us the other day that the town board had nothing to conceal. It's a cinch they have nothing to publish or else they would have taken advantage of the Courier's offer to publish a financial statement of the town free of charge made some weeks ago.

I'll bet a dinner for twelve McCreary men, if that number can be found in Morgan county, that the old war horse don't enter the race for United States Senator. The Governor is nothing if not an astute politician and the hand writing on the wall is too patent for him to fail to see that nothing short of a political revolution can defeat Mr. Beckham for the Senatorial nomination.

The value of shares in the principal express companies have depreciated nearly 25 per cent: since the parcels post law went into effect. But still some of these are selling for about $3.00 to the dollar par value. When Uncle Sam finally gets so that he can handle the business better the prices of express stock will go still lower. It took some practical demonstration like this to show us how much we were being robbed.

What do you think of the oil well at Cannel City? Ain't she a whopper? Biggest thing of its kind in Kentucky, several times over. There is more of the stuff thereabouts or we've missed our guess. Just wait until the hull of old terra firma is punctured south of "Gray Eagle" and see what happens. Oil men will be camping in tents around Cannel City before another full moon. And development won't stop there either. Wait and see.

WE'LL GLADLY SIGN.

RIGHT, COTTLE.—We are with you on your article last week, in which you went after the "dead beats" over the country for doing us poor editors out of our space, and which represents our money. We will sign a contract that we will publish the name and address of every man or set of men who fail to pay their bills at this office within three months, if every other brother editor will do the same, and then you'll see this come to a close, and people will be more prompt in paying their bills.—Morehead Mountaineer.

Glad you've joined us, Fultz. The COURIER some time ago adopted that policy, all by its lone-some, and we're glad to have you with us.

THE FAITH OF NATIONS.

Nations, like individuals, should keep faith with those with whom they make agreements. The attitude of the United States in regard to the Panama canal tolls is not such as to cause fair-minded citizens to be proud of it. In two treaties with Great Britain the United States agreed to open the canal to shippers of all nations alike. Despite these agreements Uncle Sam proposes to allow American coastwise shippers to use the canal free of toll. And when Great Britain protests and asks that faith be kept, the United States ignores the protest. And, assuming the attitude of a bully, it refuses to submit the matter to arbitration.

Nowhere in the Panama canal matter is our hands clean. The concession to build it was obtained by the rape of a defenseless nation, and the purchase of the French rights were attended with charges of graft.

Now, to benefit a few wealthy ship owners, the nation proposes to violate a solemn treaty.

A nation should be a gentleman.

SOUND ARGUMENT.

We commend the following editorial of Ed D. Shinnick, president of the Kentucky Press Association and editor of the Shelly Record, to the consideration of every newspaper publisher in Kentucky. The title of it is "Some Shop Talk," and it is worthy of being mounted and kept standing on every editorial desk as a daily reminder.

Publishing a newspaper is a business proposition. To succeed it must be carried on according to the most approved business methods. With a newspaper space in its columns is a commodity—it's only ware for sale. The public—the advertisers—put no higher valuation on that commodity than the publisher himself does. It is because so many publishers do not set sufficient value upon their space that they fail. A newspaper can have but two sources of revenue—advertising and subscription. The job plant is a separate business and neither its expense nor income should be connected with the business of the newspaper. So, if the publisher places an insignificant value upon his space, the inevitable result is failure.

One of the most common ways of creating the idea that your space is valueless is the constant "free boosts" to individuals and politicians in particular. It is not just to the man who lives by selling goods to require him to pay for every inch of space he uses and give whole columns free to men who make their living by politics. Space is space, and until the publishers realize its value themselves the public will not hold it in very high esteem. To demand a fair price for space and get that price if you sell, is the crying need. It is no cause to reduce your rates because your competitor does; perhaps it is not worth much. But read the editorial:

"The mission of a properly conducted newspaper is to inform its readers on matters in which they are interested, and in so doing to ever be conscientious and never offensive. Every newspaper has its influences, and its best efforts should be made for the betterment of moral, social, business and political conditions, at home and in the State and Nation. Every editor in Kentucky will agree with us so far, but will all them concur with us in our views upon the methods we use in our news papers should adopt in treating candidates for office and political matters generally."

"The constituted authorities have deemed it wise to pass a law making the selection of party candidates necessary through the medium of a State Primary, and the first of these will be held next August. At that time nominations for county and district offices, as well as for a United States Senator, will be made. Let us, therefore, treat all the candidates fairly and let them know that if they desire to gain publicity to their claims that our columns are open to one and all, at the same price per inch or per line, for the space they occupy. By doing this we will maintain our own respect and the respect of the candidates."

behind him. Anyone may enter any race.

"This is good, and when coupled with the sentiment that grows apace for clean politics and the selection of the best fitted men for the offices to which they aspire, the outlook for better political conditions are indeed excellent. Heretofore the personal popularity and ability to pay campaign expenses has been a considerable asset with many candidates, and because of these officials have been inflicted upon the people who were totally unfitted for the positions to which they were elected. The newspapers, in the past, have contributed not a little by their espousal of the claims of such men, to the conditions that necessarily followed.

"Our intimate association with the newspaper men of the State recently, leads us to believe that the large majority of them feel in this matter as we do: First, that a properly conducted newspaper should not be a tail to the kite of any candidate whose principal claim is his partisanship or his personal popularity to the exclusion of his fitness for the office to which he aspires. Second, that the voters should determine for themselves who are the best equipped candidates, by their knowledge of what the aspirants to office have done or are able to do, and that should come to them, if they are not already possessed of it, through such reputable mediums as articles published by the candidates, or by what they say in the speeches they make. Third, that as the primary is open to everybody, that every candidate should have the same opportunity to "talk his point" that his competitor has, and on the same terms. Fourth, that in nearly every race there are candidates who are equally reputable and competent and it is unfair to bias the opinions of the voters by defamatory remarks or publications of any man or men who may become the nominees and for whom those of their political affiliations will be in honor bound to vote in the general election.

All in all, it should be the duty of the newspapers to work to the end that a clean election should be held, and that competent men be selected to fill the public offices. The time has passed when "the hustler" who dispenses money and whiskey with a lavish hand, can count confidently upon winning his race. Public opinion has changed, and the opinion of the public is generally for what is right. Merit should win and we believe it will win in the future, for the newspaper men and the public generally have grown wise to the ways of the politicians.

We were much impressed with the truth of the following, which was read out our meeting of the Kentucky Press Association at Louisville last week.

"In the old days it was the proper thing for some small-bore politician, backed by his home paper, to achieve his ambition and then turn his back on the editor, who when the next election rolled around, picked up another with like results, and so on, never seeming to realize that he was being used as a cat-paw to pull the political chestnuts out of the fire. In fact it will hardly be denied that Kentucky editors have brought from obscurity more alleged 'country-savers' and put them on the political map, with less gratitude in return, than any other class of men in the State.

"Was ever anything truer than this said by anybody, and do not all of us know that this is an actual statement of fact. We have all torn our linen in the past for men who, when elected, had no appreciation of what we did. We gained nothing from the friendship that was promised and incurred the enmity of those who opposed them. Let us, therefore, treat all the candidates fairly and let them know that if they desire to gain publicity to their claims that our columns are open to one and all, at the same price per inch or per line, for the space they occupy. By doing this we will maintain our own respect and the respect of the candidates."

KEEP THE BOYS AT HOME

Make Them Industrious, Thoughtful and Independent and They Will Want to Stay—The Corn Club is Best Agent in Keeping From the City.

Gradually through the onward march of the centuries mankind has learned that slavery, the buying and selling of human beings, doesn't pay. Mankind has learned that no human being develops to its highest and best unless it is free. It must know and feel that it is constructing its own marvelous destiny.

The child doing almost meaningless chores, the boy slaving the hot summer day through for his father, the girl at work in the garden for the benefit of the family, are one and all in a measure enslaved. Of course everything that the child's life cannot be made easy and pleasant, but to force the child to feel that he or she is the physical slave to the family interest must hurt and dwarf its growth.

Go out into the country when the vacation sunshine is making vegetation tremble in its eagerness to grow and chat with some farmer's son, a little fellow still in the grades. If you should ask him about the future he is almost sure to say enthusiastically, "I'm goin' to town to work the very first chance I get. I'm thred-dead tired—of the farm all right."

Why does he say it? Why does he believe he will be happier in the city than in the country? He says it and believes it because he has never got anything more than his "board and keep" out of all the early rising and hard work he has known.

Wherever the boy has had an opportunity to grow a crop of his very own has shown that he is industrious, painstaking, thoughtful and mentally alert. Under such conditions he is a free man, working out his own problems.

Heart Disease Almost Fatal to Young Girl

"My daughter, when thirteen years old, was stricken with heart trouble. She was so bad we had to place her bed near a window so she could get her breath. One doctor said, 'Poor child, she is likely to fall dead any time.' A friend told me Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy had cured her father, so I tried it, and she began to improve. She took a great many baths, but when I spared to me today, a fat, rosy-cheeked girl. No one can imagine the confidence I have in Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy." A. R. CANON, Worth, Mo.

The unbounded confidence Mr. Canon has in Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy is shared by thousands of others who know its value from experience. Many heart disorders yield to treatment, if the treatment is right. If you are bothered with short breath, fainting spells, swelling of feet or ankles, pains about the heart and shoulder blades, palpitation, weak and hungry spells, you should begin using Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy at once. Profits by the experience of others while you may.

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy is sold and guaranteed by all druggists.

GUMPTION

Which is Common Sense without Educational Furbelows.

By L. T. HOVERMALE.

The March of Progress.

Shortly after the adoption of the amendments to the constitution of Ohio this column predicted that under the rights given by them the people would use the Initiative and Referendum to regain the rights that had been taken from them and given to corporations. Just now we are having that prediction verified. To avoid a submission of a question to the people one corporation has surrendered and is begging for its existence. Keep your eyes on Ohio. It is blazing a path that all the States will eventually follow.

The Cincinnati Traction Company has a fifty year franchise in that city, and in keeping with the policies of most corporations it assumed "the-public-be-damned" attitude. But Cincinnatians realized the power the recent amendments gave them, and Representative Biglow introduced a bill in the legislature revoking the franchise. Under the new rule, whether the bill passed the legislature or not, the people could demand a referendum on it and revoke the franchise by popular vote. Hence the Traction people's surrender. They offer to surrender the fifty year franchise and accept an indeterminate one, giving the city the right to take over the property at will.

The public discussion of the matter has given Cincinnatians some new ideas in the matter and it is only a matter of a short time until the city will take over the street railway and run it for the benefit of the people. That city will be the pioneer of our larger cities in the acquiring and operating the public utilities. It will lead in the movement that will take from private ownership the utilities that are public in their nature. The time is at hand when national, state and municipal governments must take over and operate for the benefit of the people all means of transportation.

European cities long ago learned that street railways, light plants, water works, etc., were properly the functions of the municipalities, and they run them for the benefit of the people, giving better service, cheaper rates and use the income to defray the city expenses. The adoption of the Initiative and Referendum will put the power to do these things in the hands of the people, and in less than two decades the American cities will be operating and owning the street railways, lighting and heating plants, waterworks and all of the utilities that are by their nature public utilities.

And it will grow and spread. The one month's experience with the parcels post has opened the eyes of the people to the gigantic extortion that has been practiced by the express companies, and they will naturally learn that the railroads are doing the same thing to them in freight rates, and soon such a howl will go up that the National government will have to take over the railroads, telegraphs and telephones and operate them for the people. These things are just as much public service functions as the mail service and the public schools, and the people will not long permit them to remain in the control of private individuals.

With the public ownership of the means of transportation will come the greatest development of the country that has ever been known. Railroads, under private ownership, are not built to benefit the people, and much of the country is kept undeveloped until such time as it suits capital. Under public ownership railroads would be built to all parts of the country, and under one system the operating expenses would be reduced and we would have better service and lower rates. And while some parts of the system, in themselves, might not be profitable, the system as a whole would be. But profit would not be the object under public ownership. It would be to give to all parts of the country a ready means of transportation, lower freight and passenger rates. There would be no watered stock to declare dividends upon, and the increased amount of shipping that would result from low rates and better facilities the revenues would aid materially in defraying the general expenses of the government, reduce the necessity for a tariff and greatly lower the cost of living.

Public ownership of public utilities is the next great step forward in the march of progress, and it is at hand.

WINDOW SHOULD BE TRIMMED OFTEN

By A. E. EDGAR.

How many people pass your store in a day? If the average is ten a minute in the eight busiest hours of the day, 4,800 people must pass your window. This number, 4,800, represents what, in newspaper parlance, is called daily circulation.

A good advertiser will change his advertisement in his local paper often, and for a similar reason the advertiser should change his window trim frequently. This is an easy matter for almost any store. It is not necessary that every elaborate detail be changed two or three times a week, but it is worth while changing some portion of it. The up-to-date window is trimmed on a unit idea, except when some one line of goods is featured exclusively. It should be an easy matter to remove one or more of the central units and replace them with others. When this is done the background and display remains in place for a week or so, while the central portion, or foreground, is frequently changed.

Price Cards Profitable.

There is not the slightest doubt that a judicious use of price tickets and window cards will pay well for their cost, and that time expended in their making. It has been proven, also, that a neat, plain window card is much more valuable than one that is glaring and sprawlily "artistic."

The window card is a small thing in itself, so is the newspaper advertisement. As the latter is an important link in the chain of publicity so should the window card be a thing of substance and meaning. Such expression as, "We'll treat you right," "We sell at lowest prices," "We have the largest stock in town," while of some value are not nearly so desirable as some definite information or suggestion about some line or article on display.

It is safe to say that the messages sent out constantly through this medium are bearing fruit every day. A card that is suggestive will always be sure of having people who read it think and ponder over the inducements offered. The good work these cards do may not always be easily traced, but they have done good for others and to all classes of stores.

A clothier and haberdasher of Chicago has stated that window cards made out of plain wrapping paper, with a carpenter's blue pencil, were the means of building up a successful business for him.

The price card is a salesman. When a man looks in a show window and notices a sale he likes he wonders first of all what the price is. He feels diffident about asking a salesman what the price may be, so passes on. If the question of "how much" is answered as often as possible by price cards, more sales will be the result.

LAZY FELLOW IN DEMAND

Gets Dozen Replies to Ad., But Shows True Colors in "Turning Down" All of Them.

"Lazy, dull, non-ambitious young man, with a high school education, wants work of some kind; has had two years' experience in dry-goods store, taught school." L. A. Norin, care Tribune.

The efficacy of this modest ad.

which appeared in the classified columns of the Minneapolis (Minn.) Tribune recently, was evidenced in a dozen offers of good jobs, but apparently not to the taste of the advertiser, who turned them all down.

Twice he was asked to take work as a stenographer, and was even offered a job as a school teacher, in which profession he already has "starred," having taught rural school, according to the ad. His reasons for not accepting these offers were that he was looking for "something intellectual" and feels that he is best fitted for "higher" kind of work.

It was stated on his behalf that he was thinking seriously of entering the University of Minnesota, and for that reason might not consider jobs of even "intellectual" work unless they were specially tempting and came very soon.

Where it is necessary to induce the exercise of a choice, it is a different proposition, for this is a case where the man intends to spend the money, perhaps for the same article that he has been buying heretofore, but instead of spending it for the article for which he intended to spend it, he is induced to make a change and buy something different. In this, the advertiser would argue or reason why this change would be a benefit to the purchaser. It will depend altogether on the reasons and the way these reasons are placed before him, that will induce him to make that change.

Must Give Reasons.

The average man in business thinks he is getting along well enough with his present appliances, until such convincing argument is brought before him as will show him why it is necessary to make an expenditure of money on which he had not counted. But, this everlasting simply dealing in generalities without any particular proposition, in view, will not accomplish the desired results. Copy that begots results must have argument that convinces by giving clear, concise, definite reasons, showing the where and the how of the proposition. It is argument that produces results, that counts. Simply coming out in an advertisement and saying: "I make the best hats in the world," is not the way to get the best hats.

Don't speak ill of a competitor.

Don't advertise in a perfidious manner.

Don't forget that, as the seasons change, the wants of the public change; and arrange samples and windows accordingly.

Don't snub the traveling man; you may want a favor at his hands some day.

Don't expect to do all of the business done in your line, nor claim that you do it all.

Don't get the idea that dust and dirt will be overlooked in your place.

Don't be "penny wise and pound foolish" in the matter of tools and appliances to work with.

Don't have too many prices; the adoption of this rule will save you considerable annoyance and promote confidence in the justness of your prices.

Don't leave your store in charge of one who has not a practical knowledge of the goods; any customer wants and expects intelligent attention.

STRAW VOTE

Who is Your Choice for the Various County Offices?

Believing that the COURIER subscription list contains most of the representative, thoughtful and progressive citizens of Morgan county, and further believing that the weight of their opinion will have much to do in determining who will be the nominees of the primary of next August, the COURIER has decided to conduct a "Straw Election" to obtain the consensus of opinion of our subscribers as to whom should be nominated.

The COURIER has no choice between the aspirants for county nominations. It will be absolutely neutral in these races, treating each with absolute fairness. But in common with all good citizens it hopes that the best men will be selected for all the offices.

RULES OF VOTING.

1. The "Straw Election" will be completed July 5, 1913, at which time all the ballots will be counted, and the result published the following week.

2. Any paid-in-advance yearly subscriber, residing in Morgan county, may cast one ballot for each of the offices to be contended for at the next August primary.

3. Only one vote will be allowed to each subscriber for each yearly subscription, and no ballot will be counted unless signed by the subscriber; but the signature will be detached by us before putting in the ballot box, and in no event will the name of the person voting or for whom he voted be divulged. It is strictly a secret ballot.

4. Only subscribers living in Morgan county may vote but the paper may be sent to any person anywhere.

5. Ballots may be sent in at any time, and as soon as a sufficient number have been received the status of the vote will be published and each week thereafter the number of votes cast for each candidate will be published.

Ballot to be used by yearly subscribers already paid.

San Jose Scale In Kentucky.

A great many of the orchards of Kentucky are badly infested with San Jose scale, becoming so common that it threatens to wipe out a great many of the orchards altogether unless strenuous measures are taken to control it. At this particular season it is well to call the attention of the orchard owners to the pest, so that steps may be taken to hold it in check.

The San Jose scale belongs to a class of insects known as sucking insects. It attacks nearly all fruits and is oftentimes found on scrubs and forest trees. On badly infested limbs it appears as a greyish scurf which is made up of millions of insects. The individual scale is round and somewhat smaller than a pin head. On the fruit the scale makes itself known by the characteristic little red blotches. The scale usually attacks the younger wood first, and if left undisturbed soon covers the whole tree. One of the best places to look for it is at the point where new wood growth started the previous season.

Since the scale is a sucking insect and obtains its food from beneath the surface of the plant host it is obvious that no spraying with Paris green or other arsenical preparation would kill it. Hence some one of the contract sprays which kill from the outside must be used. The contact sprays are caustic and penetrating in their effect and are generally used for scale insects.

Some of the most important contact sprays are Lime and Sulphur Wash Soap Solutions, Kerose Emulsion, Tobacco Extract Soluble Oils and Lye Wash.

Lime and Sulphur is the most common insecticide used. For San Jose scale it should be applied while the trees are dormant. Spray as late as possible before the buds start to swell. Lime and Sulphur for dormant trees is usually prepared as follows:

Fresh Lime (unslacked). 20 lbs.
Sulphur .15 lbs.
Water 50 gals

Prepare the above by slackening the lime and sulphur together in a large iron kettle, dilute to 15 gals. and boil from forty-five to sixty minutes. The liquid if properly prepared will turn to a reddish amber color and will be ready for use. Dilute to fifty gallons and apply as soon as possible because it loses strength on standing.

If one has a small orchard and does not care to prepare the lime and sulphur at home, it may be purchased at reasonable rates from the larger implement and supply stores. A great many of the commercial growers no longer prepare their own mixture, but use the commercial mixture instead. It should be applied as follows:

Concentrated material 1 gal.
Water .9 or 10 gals.

The above formulas give the strengths recommended for dormant sprayings only.

Remember that thoroughness is necessary in order to obtain results from spraying. Use a strong durable, brass-lined pump that will carry a good strong steady pressure. To be successful the work must be well done. This means that every limb on the tree, from the ground to the tip, is to be covered with the spray.

For further information along this or allied lines of orchard management, address the Department of Horticulture, Kentucky Experiment Station, Lexington, Ky.

The compost Heap.

The best compost heap is the manure of horses, cattle, sheep, hogs and fowls. All such should be saved. The leaves of trees that can be gathered in any quantity during winter and spring are very valuable. Rich muck in low wet places is very valuable and a great fertilizer—in fact, any decaying matter. These things can be gathered in immense quantities on any farm, and in them you have a basis for a fertilizer that will make your farm and yourself rich. Gather all these things that I have mentioned at every spare time you have during the year; in fact, make it a part of your regular work, and mix them in a heap as a basis for your fertilizer. Save all your ashes; burn brush, old logs corn stalks, trash, anything that will make ashes, and save the ashes in a dry place. They are worth their weight in silver as a fertilizer.

When you desire to make a batch of fertilizer, make a pen—any size you choose—of rails or poles, under a shed and put in the bottom about three inches deep of the manure, leaves, muck, cotton-seed, etc., until you have piled up, say, twenty-five bushels. Then sprinkle on the top of that one bushel of the salt-petre mixture. Then sprinkle the bed with a strong solution of potash or lye, then twelve bushels of ashes and lime, or ashes alone if you have no lime; then twenty-five bushels of manure, then one bushel of the salt-petre mixture, then sprinkle the bed with the solution of potash or lye, then twelve bushels of ashes and lime, and repeat the layers in the same order as high as you choose, always finishing with a layer of manure, leaves and muck. Be sure to have the heap moderately wet with the solution of potash or lye. Put up in 25c, 50c and $1.00 boxes. It's mighty fine to be well and you can soon be so by taking Solace to my father in Memphis, Tenn., for which I enclose $1. This remedy has been used by some friends of mine here and I must say its action was wonderful.
